Your Information

How and why we use it

Why do we keep information about you?

We want to make sure we are looking after you properly so we keep information about what medicines and treatments we have given you.

- Your address and the name of someone who is close to you, in case we need to contact them
- Times when we have seen you
- Important facts about your health and what we are doing to help you
- Results from any tests you have had
- Important information from other doctors, nurses or your family
- Important information from other health professionals, relatives or those who care for you and know you well

What do we do with the information?

Your information is used to direct, manage and deliver your care to ensure that:

- Doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals involved in your care, including those from other organisations, have what they need to decide how best to look after you
- We can review and improve your care if things change

Your information is also be used to manage and protect the health of other patients and the wider public by helping us to:

- Improve and adapt our services to meet the needs of our patients and future patients
- Check what has happened if something goes wrong
- Make sure hospitals, doctors, nurses and dentists get paid for the care you receive
- Report on how our services are doing
- Train and educate our doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals
- Carry out health research and development through surveys and audits

Anonymous data is used wherever possible except where related to your direct care.

How do we make sure only the right people see your information?

We will only share your information to help in looking after you and won't share it with anyone else unless:

- You ask us to share it
- We ask you and you say we can
- The laws says we have to
- We have special permission to use it for health or research
- We have special permission because it helps lots of people

Everyone providing NHS care has a legal duty to keep your information safe

Sometimes a doctor or a nurse might need to tell other organisations, such as social services, certain things so that we can all work together for you. We will tell you if they are going to do this.

Who do we work with?

We work with some organisations who might share your information with

- Hospitals and other people who provide health care
- Ambulance services
- Family doctors
- Sexual health services
- Opticians
- Pharmacies

We also might share your information with other organisations like social services, schools and councils but we will always try to talk to you about it first.
